THE ELEVENTH WEEK

Entered Upon with Brightening Prospects.

The News from Elberon Continues Favorable.

Bliss Still Sanguine and Enthusiastic.

WHAT TO-DAY'S BULLETINS SAY.

Ten Weeks of Prostration.

The President to-day enters upon the eleventh week of his prostration. In the last ten weeks there have been so many relapses and disappointments that even the most hopeful have ceased to predict what a week or a day may bring forth. It can be said to-day, however, that the President is much better than he was on last Saturday. He can take more food; the glandular system is giving less trouble; his pulse is steadier and slower, and he is better satisfied with his surroundings.

The President evidently enjoys the sea air, and yesterday the breeze from the sea was quite delicious. The President was propped up behind his pillows so that he was almost in a sitting position, and remained thus for a long time, inhaling the air it came in the open window. It was very grateful to him, and he grumbled a little when the windows were closed for fear that the air would prove injurious to his lungs. He has since reached Elberon, and has been much better, a deep, hacking cough, which has interfered considerably with his sleep, and the grunting sound which accompanies it shows that he has not sufficient strength to raise the accumulated phlegm and pus which still oozes into his mouth from the parotid gland. Since the departure of Mrs. Elson Mrs. Garfield has in measure supplied her place as nurse, which seems to be greatly appreciated by the President. If Mrs. Garfield's health would admit of it, the President said yesterday, he would sooner have her with him than anyone else. He remarked also that he believed one reason why he felt so much better was that there were so few doctors around, and then he added, in quite a humorous tone, "I will be so glad when there are no doctors at all about me."

Still in a Dark Valley.

Dr. Boynton said yesterday afternoon that he could not go far as to say that the President was convalescing; that he still had a dark valley to pass through, but he felt ever so much encouraged at the symptoms, and if things went on at the same rate for a few days more he would really begin to hope that the President was on the fair road to recovery.

Dr. Bliss, on the contrary, still insists that the patient is convalescing.

What Dr. Agnew Said.
Dr. Agnew, on his arrival last night, made a critical examination of the President, and expressed himself as quite satisfied with the situation. He was informed of the fact mentioned, that the ball had been located. The President was in a very talkative mood last night, and inquired as to the condition of his pulse and temperature, and said: "Well, I must be doing pretty well." Last night the catheter entered the wound only to the extent of ten inches, which was considered a remarkably good sign, and an indication that the wound was healing. Three of the incisions made in the parotid gland have entirely healed. Dr. Bliss, in conversation with several members of the medical profession, spoke more confidently of the case than he has to members of the press. If there should be no relapse to-day or Sunday he would have no further apprehensions.

Last Night's Bulletin.

The bulletin issued last evening was as follows: "ELBERON, N. J., Sept. 9--6 p. m.--At the examination of the President at 12 m. to-day the temperature was 98.4; pulse, 100; respiration, 17. At the evening dressing, at 5:30 p. m., the temperature was 98.5; pulse, 100; respiration, 18. It is believed, without referring to the records, that this is the first day since the development of the traumatic fever that the temperature, pulse and respiration have been so nearly normal and uniform throughout the entire day."

Minister Lowell.

"The medical reports are all favorable to-day--morning, noon and night. The President has not for many weeks done so well for so many consecutive hours. He has been able to eat and to sleep, and his pulse is normal and his pulse has not exceeded 100. He slept without opiates and gained strength without stimulants. His nights are not so restless as could be desired, but in the 24 hours he gets sufficient sleep."

He Would Not Eat the Pet.

Yesterday there was sent by express a tin cage with a live squirrel in it. On a card attached to the cage was written, "For the President, from Anna and Ella." The poor little creature looked as if it realized that it was to be converted into soup, and the President seemed to appreciate this when it was taken into his room and shown to him; for he said, with a moistened eye: "I won't eat Anna and Ella's pet; send it back to them."

This Morning's Bulletin.

The following was issued this morning: "ELBERON, Sept. 10--9 a. m.--At the examination of the President at 8:30 o'clock this morning, the temperature was 99.4; pulse, 104, and respiration, 18. He slept well during the night, awakening only at intervals of half an hour to an hour each. There is a perceptible increase of strength with an improved condition of the digestive apparatus. The tumefaction of the parotid has entirely disappeared and the suppuration has greatly diminished. The wound continues to improve and presents a more healthy appearance."

D. HAYES AGNEW.

"D. W. BLISS."

Saturday Brings Fear.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 10--12:00 p. m.--The President is not believed to have been as well when he first awoke this morning as he was at the same hour yesterday. His sleep was somewhat disturbed. There was a depressing effect caused by the dampness, and he was nervous. The weather is disagreeable, and there was a heavy sea fog during the night, and many persons seem to have fears of a bad Saturday. The surgeons were not inclined to talk much this morning. Dr. Hamilton has gone. Dr. Agnew has nothing to say on the subject. Dr. Bliss says he is as

Sanguine and Enthusiastic as Ever, and insists that the President is first rate.

Dr. Boynton, however, whose views are very conservative, says the President is not feeling as well as he did yesterday, but at the same time he does not think there is anything to cause additional anxiety. He also says that the wound is looking better, and that the discharge is about right in quantity and of a better quality. Taken as a whole, the morning bulletin is regarded as pretty good, but it will be observed that the pulse, temperature, and respiration are a little higher than they were yesterday morning.

A patent movable chair has arrived here. On this it is hoped to place the President, after a few days' more improvement, and to roll him out on the seaside balcony, so as to give him the full benefit of the ocean breezes and scenes. At this writing a slight increase of strength is reported; also an improvement in the tone of the stomach.

A. J. C.

Better Than This Morning.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE EVENING CRITIC.
LONG BRANCH, Sept. 10--1:43 p. m.--Dr. Bliss stated to THE CRITIC correspondent at 1 o'clock that the President was doing well, and that he was much better than at the morning dressing. His pulse at 1 o'clock was 100; and his temperature and respiration normal. Last night's fever was longer and later than usual, but it was not as severe as his fevers in Washington.

The President is reported in good spirits. He asked Dr. Bliss this morning if he could not get into his easy-chair to-day. He was told not to-day, but probably to-morrow. All the members of the Cabinet, with their ladies, called at Franklyn cottage to-day and paid their respects to Mrs. Garfield
